The Millennium Development Goals, climate change, and the sustainability imperatives expressed in forums such as the World Summit on Sustainable Development, require policy and operational responses from industry. In this context, Hydro Tasmania Consulting has actively contributed to the development of the International Hydropower Association's "Sustainability Guidelines" and those of the World Wind Energy Association. These documents provide leading edge evaluative tools for governments, wind and hydropower developers, and the wider community for approving, constructing and operating renewable energy projects.

In international and domestic forums Hydro Tasmania Consulting has also promoted the strategic message that the symphony of renewables; wind, solar, hydro and biomass, have a vital role to play in supplying energy from renewable resources. A key issue has been the need for the renewable energy industry to have a united voice if it is to inform the policy processes of government in addressing the important implications of reducing greenhouse gas emissions. An added service provided by Hydro Tasmania Consulting has been contributions to national and international conferences taking forward the sustainability agenda.

Further to this role in strategic policy nationally and internationally, Hydro Tasmania Consulting's, Sustainable Business Program provides services to clients to assess and improve energy efficiency, thereby assisting with measures to meet their greenhouse reduction targets and support them with programs such as Greenhouse Challenge.
